- Once upon a time, a clever monkey lived near a river on a jamun tree. A crocodile also lived in the same river and slowly became friends with the monkey. Every day, the monkey gave sweet fruits to the crocodile, who took them home for his wife. However, the crocodile's wife became greedy and wished to eat the monkey's heart, believing it would be sweeter than the fruits. Though unwilling at first, the crocodile finally agreed to trick the monkey. While crossing the river with the monkey on his back, the crocodile revealed his plan. The clever monkey did not panic and calmly said that he had left his heart on the tree. The crocodile swam back, and as soon as they reached the bank, the monkey jumped onto the tree and saved his life. Thus, wisdom and presence of mind helped the monkey escape danger.
- 1) Where did the monkey live?
 - 2) How did the monkey and the crocodile become friends?
 - 3) What made the crocodile's wife greedy?

- Education plays a very important role in shaping the character and future of an individual. It not only provides knowledge of different subjects but also teaches discipline, moral values, and social responsibility. An educated person is better able to think logically, make wise decisions, and contribute positively to society. Education helps people to understand their rights and duties and makes them aware of social problems. It also improves employment opportunities and raises the standard of living. In a broader sense, education is the foundation of national development, as an educated society is more progressive, peaceful, and prosperous.
